Annapolis County

Annapolis County lies in the centre of Nova Scotia's Annapolis Valley, extending from the middle of the province, on the south, to the Bay of Fundy, on the north. A fertile trough of land lies between the North and South Mountains. The Annapolis River flows the length of the valley floor.

Canada's first frontier started at Port Royal under the leadership of Champlain, De Monts and Poutrincourt. The "Order of Good Cheer" lives today as a reminder of this first settlement. The early settlement shifted somewhat from the original habitation site, with Fort Anne being the last of a succession of forts built to guard the colony.

While the region was ceded to Britain in 1713 it was not until 1755 that the Acadians were expelled. The land was given to 400 "Planters" from Massachusetts, but the significant stimulus was provided by the large scale immigration of United Empire Loyalists between 1775 and 1785. Agriculture quickly became the dominant activity and export markets for apples began with the completion of the Halifax-Windsor railway in 1850.

Apple exports to Europe were severely reduced through the succession of World War I, the depression and World War II, with a resulting adverse effect of the economy. Diversification of the agricultural base into dairy, beef, poultry and eggs has taken place since the 1940's. In the western part of the county the fishery is of economic importance while the defence bases at Cornwallis and at Greenwood, in Kings County, bolster the commercial activity of the area.

Due to the lack of legal or official boundaries, the Census is not always able to distinguish the population of these unincorporated places from that of the surrounding area.

The population totals shown in this report for 1976 and 1981 should thus be considered as approximations.

[1]Low income statistics are based on the revised (1978) cut-offs which were initially estimated from the 1978 National Family Expenditure Survey and then updated to 1980 by the changes in the Consumer Price Index since 1978. The cut-offs are based on size of family unit and population size of area of residence.
